Ram had two donkeys. He used to put bags of goods on their backs. The donkeys would carry the goods to the hills. Their master sold these goods to people living in the hills.

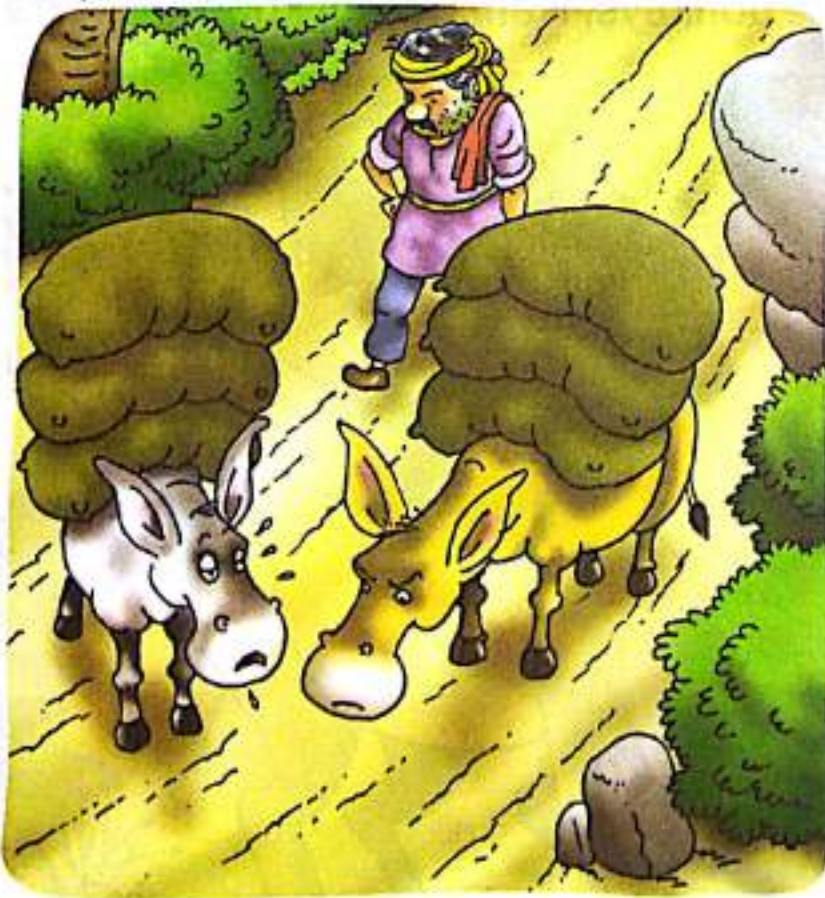

One day, Ram was going on a trip to the hills. He put equal number of bags on both the donkeys. Ram did not know that one donkey was ill. The ill donkey said to the other, 'Brother, I cannot carry this load.' The other donkey said, 'We have to do as our master says. This is our duty.'

After walking for sometime, the ill donkey became tired. He said to the other donkey, 'Brother, I am not feeling well. Can you take one of my bags?' The other donkey was not kind and helpful. He replied, 'I already have three bags. I am carrying mine, you carry yours.' Saying this, he walked on.

The ill donkey walked as far as he could and then fell down dead. One of his bags went over the hill.

Ram was very sad. He sat down near the dead donkey. Then he took the two bags that were left, and put them on the other donkey. Now the other donkey felt sorry that he had not helped his ill brother. He would have to carry only one extra bag then.

*How do you like to go up in the swing,
Up in the air so blue?
Oh! I do think it the pleasantest thing
Ever a child can do!*

*Up in the air and over the wall,
Till I can see so wide,
Rivers and trees and cattle and all
Over the countryside-*

*Till I look down on the garden green,
Down on the roof so brown-
Up in the air I go flying again,
Up in the air and down!*

Robert Louis Stevenson

NEW WORDS

flour, gems, crash, famine, trouble, smashed

There was a poor man called Raghu. So poor was he that some days he did not even have food to eat.

One day, he got a pot of wheat flour. He was very happy. He hung the pot near his bed and lay down. 'I wish I was rich', thought Raghu. 'Then I would not have to beg from door to door.' And he began to dream.

'Shall I eat this wheat flour?' he thought. 'Suppose there is a famine, then I will sell this wheat flour for a lot of money. Then I will buy a cow. The cow will give calves and milk. I will sell the milk and buy a sweet shop. I will sell good burfi, rasogullas and gulabjamuns. Children will come running to buy my sweets. I will get richer and richer.'

With all the money, I will buy gems. I will go to the king. He will say, 'I have never seen such beautiful gems!' He will give me lots and lots of money.

I will buy a big house with a swimming pool and fruit trees.

White swans will be swimming about in the pool. Then, one day, the king will come to me and ask me to marry the princess.

I shall say, 'Yes'. Soon we will have a son.

I will love him but when he is naughty, I will beat him. If he troubles me too much, I will take a stick and beat him hard.

Thinking he was beating his son, Raghu moved his hand in the air. Crash! The pot of wheat flour fell down and was smashed into hundred pieces.

The noise woke up Raghu. He looked around but there was no big house, no pool, no princess, no son and no pot of wheat flour even.
